I did not review the P form, just the C forms. Sociology does have a robust curriculum in Children, Youth and Families. However, it seems your focus is different from ours and I do not foresee a conflict nor do we mind the healthy competition.

Course Catalog Description: Reviews interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary perspectives on the importance of psychosocial, cultural, ecological, economic and historical factors affecting the ability of families to nurture the healthy development of children and youth. Knowledge of the importance of such factors will be used to learn about the development of effective programs and policies for families and their members. Will gain understanding of assets- and resilience-based perspectives. Prerequisites: Anth 200, HD 101, HD 102. HD 230 or HD 231

More Complete Course Description The course will focus on understanding socially, economically and culturally diverse families and on identifying various factors that help or hinder their ability to promote the healthy development of their children and youth. Various psychosocial, cultural, economic and historical factors will be reviewed and discussed that empirical evidence suggests can either help or hinder a family's ability to function well and lead to the healthy development of children and youth. The course reviews theories and research employing assets- and resilience-based perspectives. The course will point to the relevance of the information and knowledge gained from the course to professionals working with children, youth and families. The course will give special consideration to identifying and understanding resilience and protective factors and how such knowledge can be used in the development of effective prevention and intervention programs to address the concerns of underserved populations and their families.

Relevance to Program Student Learning Outcomes (PSLOs) This course contributes to the accomplishment of primarily PSLO 2:

PSLO 2: Demonstrate understanding of how social categories such as gender, race, ethnicity, class, age, ability, sexuality, and religion—and the intersections of these identities—relate to diverse experiences across the lifespan.

Course Overall Learning Objective Related to PSLO 2: Students will be able to give examples of how gender, race, ethnicity, class, age, ability, sexuality, and religion—and the intersections of these identities—relate to diverse experiences across the lifespan influence families and in turn influence the development of culturally diverse children, youth and families.

The course also partly contributes to PSLO 1:

PSLO 1: Demonstrate understanding of developmental theories and how biological, psychological, social, historical and cultural dynamics influence developmental processes, and use theory as a framework to address real-world problems relating to lifespan development in applied settings such as counseling, healthcare, and education.

Course Overall Learning Objective Related to PSLO 1: While less so, this course contributes to PSLO 1 by helping the student demonstrate an understanding of how theories help explain how psychosocial, cultural and historical factors influence developmental processes, which determine the well-being and integration of children and youth within society.

Course Student Learning Outcomes (CSLOs) Upon completion of this course students will be able to:

1. Demonstrate understanding of the role of social, cultural, economic and educational factors in developing healthy families and healthy children, youth and communities.
2. Explain how assets- and resilience-based perspectives contrast with deficiency-based perspectives to inform the development of children, youth, adults and families.
3. Demonstrate familiarity with interdisciplinary and multicultural theories in how they explain the role of the family in the development of children and youth.
4. Describe the theoretical and conceptual characteristics of successful programs that serve socially, culturally and economically diverse children, youth and families.
5. Demonstrate understanding of the destructive effects of family violence on the development of children and youth.

Course Requirements

Credit Hour Policy: Study Time Required Outside of Class Per University policy, you are expected to devote 2 hours of study outside of class for every unit of class. This is a three unit course and so you are expected to devote a minimum of six hours of study time per week. This class will meet the University Credit Hour Policy.

Readings:

Congress, Elaine Piller & Gonzalez, Manny J. (Eds.) (2005). Multicultural perspectives in working with families (2nd Ed.). Springer, New York.
Maholmes, Valerie (2014). Fostering resilience and well-being in children and families: Why hope still matters. Oxford University Press, New York.

Exams (midterm and final):

Two Multiple Choice exams based on lectures, presentations, films and readings. The exams will assess the retention of knowledge, as well as its application, thereby demonstrating critical thinking.

Final Paper (signature assignment):

A 20 to 25 page critical analysis research paper will be written that will focus on a specific underserved community and population located in North County. The paper will identify social, psychological, cultural, economic and educational challenges facing families, children and youth and will put these within a social, economic and historical context. Community assets, protective and resiliency along with risk factors will be identified and used in developing or enhancing existing or new and needed programs and services for families for the benefit of children, youth and families. A minimum of 10 research articles will be reviewed and incorporated within the final paper. Paper will be written in APA style of writing. More specific information and paper guidelines will be provided in class.

Grading

Exams:

Worth 50 percent of final grade or 25 percent each exam (100 item exams):	500
Critical analysis final research paper (40 percent of grade):	400
Discussion and participation in Class Participation (10 percent—including attendance and class discussion):	100
Total Points	1000

Course Format

This course is a traditional face-to-face mode of instruction with the use of Cougar Courses for submission of assignments and for receiving additional instructions.

Class Participation and Discussion Everyone is expected to participate in class discussion. This includes asking questions and participating in answering questions the instructor and guest presenters pose to students.

Writing Requirement In accordance with the University’s “All-University Writing Requirement”, students in this class will have a writing assignment, which will meet or surpass the minimum of 10 page or 2,500 word University requirement. In this course the requirement will be achieved through the critical analysis research paper, which will be between 10 and 20 double-spaced pages not counting references and any appendices. This writing assignment will cover the minimum writing requirement of 10 pages or 2,500 words.

Required Materials and Technological Competency Requirements

As a student you will need to have access to a computer, to be competent in typing and be able to utilize the internet to gain access to Cougar Courses, which will be used for submitting completed assignments and to receive any further additional class instructions. Students may contact the CSUSM Help Desk for assistance. You can contact them by email at sth@csusm.edu or by phone at 760-6505 or you can stop by for help at the Student Technology Helpdesk on the second floor of Kellogg Library.

Late Submissions of Assignments or Missing Exams Late submissions of assignments will lead to a 25% reduction in points allocated to the assignment. Points will be lost for exams if not taken, unless valid excuse is provided. In which case, the instructor will work with the student to administer the exam as appropriate.

Attendance Policy, Arriving Late to Class Policy and Being Dropped from the Class

Administratively Not attending the first week of class will result in you being administratively dropped from the class, unless you have provided a valid reason (e.g., illness). You are expected to attend all class meetings. It is too disruptive to have people arriving late or leaving early so please arrive on time and leave when the class is over. Please limit bathroom visits. Each unexcused absence will result in a reduction in 50 points and late arrivals or early departures will result in 25 point loss. Missing over 25% of the class sessions will lead to failing the class.

Use of Cell Phones, Computers and Laptops in During Class

1. No cell phones are permitted to be used during class time. Turn them off as soon as you arrive.
2. Computers are only allowed only for course notes taking in class. Emailing or reading personal messages is forbidden and will lead to being asked to leave class immediately.
3. Students are required to use a computer for the course outside of class. We will use Cougar Courses for posting all class materials including the syllabus, as well as for submitting all course assignments. You will use optical scanning forms for exams, which you are required to purchase and bring to class (green optical scanning form).

CSUSM Academic Honesty Policy

Students will be expected to adhere to standards of academic honesty and integrity, as outlined in the Student Academic Honesty Policy. All written work and oral presentation assignments must be original work. All ideas/material that are borrowed from other sources must have appropriate references to the original sources. Any quoted material should give credit to the source and be punctuated with quotation marks.

Students are responsible for honest completion of their work including examinations. There will be no tolerance for infractions. If you believe there has been an infraction by someone in the class, please bring it to the instructor's attention. The instructor reserves the right to discipline any student for academic dishonesty, in accordance with the general rules and regulations of the university. Disciplinary action may include the lowering of grades and/or the assignment of a failing grade for an exam, assignment, or the class as a whole.

Incidents of Academic Dishonesty will be reported to the Dean of Students. Sanctions at the University level may include suspension or expulsion from the University

ADA Statement

Students with disabilities who require reasonable accommodations must be approved for services by providing appropriate and recent documentation to the Office of Disabled Student Services

(DSS). This office is located in Craven Hall 5205, and can be contacted by phone at (760) 750-4905, or TTY (760) 750-4909. Students authorized by DSS to receive reasonable accommodations should meet with me during my office hours in order to ensure confidentiality.

Code of Conduct

Students are expected to conduct themselves in a manner appropriate for class and comply with the rules of student conduct. The rules of student conduct are included in the California Code of Regulations, Title 5, and beginning at Section 41301. A student who violates university policies or regulations is subject to disciplinary action, which can result in a warning, reprimand, probation, suspension, or expulsion. The Chancellor of the California State University specifies procedures under which the university may take disciplinary action against a student. These procedures are on file in the Office of the Dean of Students, Craven Hall, Room 5306.

Rubric for PSLOs and SLOs

In Regards to Program Student Learning Outcomes (PSLOs) Students successfully passing the class will be able to:

PSLO 2: Demonstrate understanding of how social categories such as gender, race, ethnicity, class, age, ability, sexuality, and religion—and the intersections of these identities—relate to diverse experiences across the lifespan.

Course Goal: Will be able to give examples of how gender, race, ethnicity, class, age, ability, sexuality, and religion—and the intersections of these identities—relate to diverse experiences across the lifespan influence families and in turn influence the development of culturally diverse children, youth and families.

While less so, the course also contributes to PSLO 1, since it reviews research informing theories related to families, children and youth and how such knowledge can be used in applied settings.

PSLO 1: Demonstrate understanding of developmental theories and how biological, psychological, social, historical and cultural dynamics influence developmental processes, and use theory as a framework to address real-world problems relating to lifespan development in applied settings such as counseling, healthcare, and education.

Course Goal: While less so, this course contributes to PSLO 1 by helping the student demonstrate an understanding of how theories help explain how psychosocial, cultural and historical factors influence developmental processes, which determine the well-being and integration of children and youth within society.

Will be able to identify a model or theory for understanding family functioning in multicultural families and be able to discuss the implication of the model for family services.

Student Learning Outcomes for the Course By the end of the semester, students are expected to have gained the following learning outcomes:

1. Understand the role of social, cultural, economic and educational factors in developing healthy families and healthy children, youth and communities.

Rubric Outcome: Indicate at least one salient specific social, cultural, economic and educational factor which research has shown impacts families, their children youth and communities favorably or unfavorably.

2. Understand asset and resiliency-based perspectives and how they inform us about the development of children, youth, adults and families, while contrasting them with pathologic perspectives.

Rubric Outcome: Will be able to name at least one salient asset and one salient resiliency perspective and discuss how it differs from a more traditional pathological perspective.

3. Become familiar with interdisciplinary and multicultural theories in how they explain the role of the family in the development of children and youth.

Rubric Outcome: Name at least one interdisciplinary and/or multicultural theory and discuss how it is unique in explaining the role of the family in affecting the development of children and youth.

4. Be aware of the theoretical and conceptual characteristics of successful programs that work with socially, culturally and economically diverse children, youth and families to address their social, educational and health needs.

Rubric Outcome: Name a theory or a conceptual characteristic underlying a successful program, which works with socially, culturally, and/or economically diverse children, youth and/or their families.

5. Learn the main debilitating or destructive effects of family violence on the development of children and youth.

Rubric Outcome: Describe the debilitating or destructive effects of family violence on the development of children and/or youth.

Course Student Learning Outcomes (CSLOs) By the end of the semester, students are expected to have gained the following learning outcomes:

1. Demonstrate understanding of the role of social, cultural, economic and educational factors in developing healthy families and healthy children, youth and communities.
2. Explain how assets- and resilience-based perspectives contrast with deficiency-based perspectives to inform the development of children, youth, adults and families.
3. Show familiarity with interdisciplinary and multicultural theories in how they explain the role of the family in the development of children and youth.
4. Describe the theoretical and conceptual characteristics of successful programs that serve socially, culturally and economically diverse children, youth and families.
5. Demonstrate understanding of the destructive effects of family violence on the development of children and youth.
