9. Why is this course being proposed? The Global Studies major currently lacks an appropriate course for introducing Global Studies students to fundamental concepts, principles, and processes of the international political economic system. This course will serve as this introduction by teaching students the basics of international trade, international finance, and economic development from an international political economic perspective. In doing so it will provide the foundational knowledge of international economics and politics necessary for Global Studies majors to recognize and understand the important relationship between economics and politics in the international system.

University Catalog Course Description

Introduction to the interaction between economics and politics in the international system, with emphasis on the global, national, and local impacts of international trade, economic development, and international finance. Exploration of the important roles played by states and non-state actors such as corporations and international organizations in global political economy.

Course Learning Objectives

Following completion of the course students will be able to:

- 1) Summarize the principal theories of international political economy.
- 2) Discuss the global, national, and local socio-political consequences of states' foreign economic policies.
- 3) Explain the impacts that non-state actors such as multinational corporations and intergovernmental organizations have on global economic relations and national economies.
- 4) Explain why economic, political, and social inequalities have existed and continue to exist within the international system and within countries.
- 5) Analyze economic and political interactions between states and non-state actors in the international system

The Global Studies Department has a set of learning outcomes for all of its graduates. Following completion of the required GBST curriculum students will be able to:

- Describe and explain how their own culture is one of many diverse cultures and that alternate perceptions and behaviors may be based in cultural differences.
- Analyze world geography, global issues, processes, trends and systems.
- Compare and contrast global cultures (beliefs, values, religions, arts, practices, and philosophies).
- Interpret and analyze global issues from a variety of disciplinary perspectives to think critically and solve problems.
- Communicate in and use second-language skills (at an intermediate high proficiency level) in order to gain knowledge of other cultures to extend access to information, experiences, and understanding.

The Political Science Department has a set of learning outcomes for all of its graduates. Following completion of the required PSCI curriculum students will be able to:

1. Summarize the foundational principles and key concepts in all four subfields of Political Science (American Politics, International Relations, Comparative Politics, and Political Theory).
2. Describe and analyze the roles played by race, ethnicity, gender, and class in historical and contemporary political environments and analyze and evaluate the impact of such factors across the four subfields of Political Science.
3. Analyze and evaluate the role of state and non-state actors, institutions and organizations, and policy in at least two of the four subfields of Political Science.
4. Apply theories, political thought, ideologies, and ideas to historical content and contemporary empirical realities in at least two of the four subfields of Political Science.
5. Apply critical thinking skills and knowledge of research methods to formulate and implement a research design to analyze political phenomena.
6. Utilize effective writing skills to analyze political issues, ideas, and policies; these skills include formulating a thesis, making arguments, and providing evidence.

Teaching Philosophy and Course Goals

"A mind is a terrible thing to waste."

Motto of the United Negro College Fund

The above quote offers a simple summation of my teaching philosophy. In my view a university's principal responsibility is to create an environment where students can develop intellectual talents and skills that might otherwise lie dormant. As a student in this course, you will be pushed to reach and expand your intellectual potential. Each assignment, each class meeting, and each reading is designed to help you develop the skills necessary to think critically about the world around you. However, the development of critical thinking skills is not an end in and of itself. Such skills will prove very necessary for whatever career path one chooses after college. Put simply, thinking critically is a vital skill for solving the problems that each of us confronts in our everyday lives whether we are a stay-at-home parent, military personnel, a mechanic, a teacher, or the CEO of a large company.

Required Text

Theodore H. Cohn. Global Political Economy: Theory and Practice, 7th Edition. New York: Routledge, 2016.

Tips for the Reading Assignments

- 1) When you encounter a word or term that you do not know, LOOK IT UP IN A DICTIONARY or try the glossary in the back of the Cohn book which defines many of the terms used in the text. In addition, the Cohn book relies extensively on acronyms and abbreviations. A list of these acronyms/abbreviations and their definitions can be found on pages xiii and xiv of the preface. If you have looked up a word or term in the glossary of the Cohn book and a dictionary, and you are still scratching your head, ASK ME FOR ASSISTANCE IN CLASS!!! I'm here to help you (but only after you have tried to help yourself)! ☺
- 2) Rely on an "active" reading strategy when studying for this class and ALL of your classes. An active reading strategy is one in which you write notes about the meaning of the material while you are reading.
- 3) Last but not least, I have included "study questions" within the syllabus for each reading assignment. These questions are designed to help you to better understand the course material as well as help prepare you for the midterm and final exams. I will expect each one of you to be able to briefly answer these study questions in class as part of your responsibilities for class participation.

Papers and Exams

Students will complete an in-class short essay exam, one short paper, a 6-8 page take-home midterm exam, write a 4-6 page paper on each of the three case studies we will examine this semester, and complete a take-home final. All papers should be typed (or word-processed), use margins no larger than 1.25 in. and a font no larger than 12 points. Case papers are due in class the day that the case will be discussed in class. Late case papers will not be accepted.

All the information needed to complete the midterms and papers is available in the assigned readings. There is no need to engage in research outside of class although students are welcome to do so as long as this information complements rather than replaces the information contained in the assigned readings. No more than 25% of the information cited in the take-home exams can be from your lecture notes. The remaining 75% must come from the readings.

Papers submitted after the "due time" will not be accepted unless prior arrangements are made with the professor.

Students have the option of revising only ONE analytical brief in order to receive a higher grade. However in order to qualify for the option of revision the first draft of a brief must be COMPLETE. That is, the first draft must meet the length requirement and demonstrate that a genuine effort was made to complete the assignment. Please note that a higher grade can only be the product of a revision of mechanics and content. In other words, you will have to re-write portions of the paper as well as correct spelling and grammatical errors. Revised papers must be submitted no more than one week after the original paper is returned to the student by the professor. Revisions will not be accepted unless they are submitted with the original draft of the paper. NO EXCEPTIONS.

General Grading Guidelines for Written Assignments*

Written assignments will be graded according to content and mechanics. 75% of the grade will be based on content (Did you do ALL the things you were supposed to do? How well did you do these things? Adequately? Very well? Exceptionally well? etc...). The remaining 25% will be based on mechanics (spelling, grammar, organization, clarity, etc...).

"A" papers will accomplish all the required tasks of the assignment exceptionally well. "A" papers will be explicitly analytical, very well organized, use clear, direct language, and have almost no spelling errors. These papers will also rely extensively on information available in the readings. Finally, all information in "A" papers will be properly cited.¹

"B" papers will accomplish all the required tasks of the assignment very well. "B" papers will contain analysis that is mostly explicit but may contain a limited amount of implicit analysis, be well organized, use language that is mostly clear and direct, and will contain a few spelling errors. These papers will rely on information from the readings but not all that they could. "B" papers may also have an incorrect citation.

"C" papers will accomplish all or most of the required tasks of the assignment but will not accomplish all these tasks well. "C" papers will be more implicitly analytical rather than explicitly analytical, be somewhat well organized, contain a mixture of clear and awkward language, and might contain several spelling and grammatical errors. These papers will rely on some information from the readings but less than an "A" or "B" paper. "C" papers are also likely to have some incorrect or missing citations.

"D" papers will not accomplish all the required tasks of the assignment and those tasks that are accomplished will be accomplished poorly. "D" papers will be descriptive instead of analytical, poorly organized, contain mostly awkward language, and possibly contain extensive spelling and grammatical errors. These papers will rely extremely little on information from the readings. "D" papers are also likely to have several incorrect or missing citations.

"F" papers will accomplish very few of the required tasks of the assignment and will do so very poorly. "F" papers will have many of the following characteristics: descriptive rather than analytical language, a lack of organization, contain awkward, unclear language, and contain extensive spelling and grammatical errors. These papers will use little to no information from the readings and are likely to have many improper or missing citations.

*In addition, grade categories for each assignment will also be influenced by the quality of the best papers (i.e., the best papers help set the standards for all other papers).

What is Analysis?

Analysis is something we do every day. For example, when you are merging from an onramp on to the highway you are engaging in analysis. How? As you are merging you estimate the speed of oncoming traffic and based on this estimation you decide whether to speed up or slow down so that you can safely join the flow of traffic on the highway. This is one form of analysis.

Is doing analysis in writing any different? Not really. When asked to conduct an analysis in a paper you are being asked to perform several specific tasks. For example, let's say you are asked to analyze a particular event such as layoffs in a particular industry. The first thing you will need to propose a brief explanation for this decline. This brief explanation will serve as your thesis. For example, if I was analyzing defense industry layoffs during the 1990s I might offer the following: "Defense industry layoffs during the 1990s were due, in large part, to the end of the Cold War." Please note that this statement does NOT rely on explicit reasoning. Instead it is simply a description of a possible reason for these layoffs, in other words, implicit reasoning. In order to engage in explicit reasoning, you must use whatever evidence you can find to illustrate, in detail, how the end of the Cold contributed to these layoffs. The task of explicitly explaining the logical relationship(s) between a series of events is analysis.

Therefore, you cannot simply say, or assert, that "A" causes "B," you must illustrate, using evidence and logic, exactly how "A" causes "B." If you simply say that "A" causes "B" you are engaging in "implicit analysis." What does this mean? It means that you are forcing your reader to figure out exactly how "A" causes "B" instead of completing this task for the reader. In contrast, "explicit analysis" is when you illustrate exactly how "A" causes "B" so that your reader can easily see the logical relationship between "A" and "B."

Returning to our example of defense industry layoffs during the 1990s, one can easily demonstrate the difference between "implicit" and "explicit" analysis.

Implicit

"Defense industry layoffs during the 1990s were due, in large part, to the end of the Cold War. Because this war was over, many jobs were lost."

Explicit

"Defense industry layoffs during the 1990s were due, in large part, to the end of the Cold War. During the Cold War companies such as General Dynamics and Lockheed Martin manufactured the sophisticated weaponry necessary to fight the Soviet Union. Following the implosion of the Soviet Union in the early 1990s, it became clear that the USSR no longer posed a credible military threat to the United States. As a consequence, the federal government's demand for sophisticated weapons dropped precipitously. In response weapons manufacturers greatly reduced production and laid off thousands of workers."

When the "implicit" passage above is compared with the "explicit" passage two significant differences become apparent. First, the explicit passage contains more information than the implicit passage. Moreover, this information is used to give the reader details that will make the logical relationship between the end of the Cold War and defense industry layoffs very clear. Second, the explicit passage offers two specific causes for these layoffs: 1) a drop in the federal government's demand for sophisticated weapons, and 2) a large drop in weapons production. In contrast, the implicit passage simply says that the end of the Cold War led to job losses but does not explain exactly how these two things are related. Use this lesson as a guide to help avoid implicit reasoning and implicit analysis in your papers.

Class Participation and Attendance Policy

What will you need to do to earn participation points? In short, you will need to do the assigned reading before class, come to class ready to discuss the day's reading and the study questions, and be able to actively contribute to discussion of the day's reading and study questions during class.

All students are expected to participate effectively in small group discussion on "Case Study Days" (Mar. 20, Apr. 22, and May 1). On "Case Study Days" the class will be broken into small groups in which students will discuss and answer the case study questions collectively. Failure to attend class and participate effectively on a "Case Study Day" will result in an automatic deduction of 2 participation points (out of a total of 20). "Effective" participation on case study days is defined as coming to class having already read the material, participating in the small group discussion, and making a substantive contribution to this discussion.

Students can also earn general participation points by playing a part in spontaneous classroom discussions and by answering questions posed by the professor during class. The principal goals of the class participation policy are to: encourage students to complete reading assignments, provide a feedback mechanism for the professor to regularly assess the performance of all students within the course, help students gain greater confidence speaking in public speaking, and stimulate vibrant discussion of the course material. Students are allowed three unexcused absences. After the third unexcused absence, students will lose two (2) participation points for each partial or full day that is missed.

Class Participation Grading Formula

20-18 points	Students who always "participate"
17-15 points	Students who almost always "participate"
14-6 points	Students who sometimes "participate"
5-1 points	Students who almost never "participate"
0 points	Students who never "participate"

Academic Honesty and Conduct

I expect every student to behave according to the highest ethical standards in class. Please respect the views and opinions of each student. If you disagree with what another student has to say about a particular issue please disagree respectfully. Disruptive students will be asked to leave the class.

Plagiarism and cheating are serious academic offenses and can be grounds for expulsion from the university. Plagiarism in papers will lead to a zero for that assignment, and no opportunity for revision of the paper involved. Plagiarism is defined as intentionally or knowingly using the words or ideas of another person or source without properly citing that person or source. ANY TIME that you use words or an idea(s) from a book, article, film, documentary, speech, etc... in a paper that you are writing you MUST cite the source. This includes the books and sources we are using in class. All instances of plagiarism will be reported to the Dean of Students as required by the CSUSM policy on academic honesty. This policy is available at:

http://www.csusm.edu/student_affairs/Policies/academic_honesty.htm

Grading

Students will receive grades according to the following percentages:

A+	100-98%
A	97-93%
A-	92-90%
B+	89-87%
B	86-83%
B-	82-80%
C+	79-77%
C	76-73%
C-	72-70%
D+	69-67%
D	66-63%
D-	62-60%
F	59% or below

No extra credit assignments will be offered. If you have a heavy load this semester, have extensive extra-curricular demands on your time, or are working full-time in addition to attending school be sure to organize your study time accordingly.

Breakdown of Final Grade by Percentage

In-class Midterm	10 points
One Page Paper	10 points
Take-Home Midterm	20 points
Three Analytical Briefs	45 points (@ 15 points each)
Take-Home Final	30 points
Class Participation	20 points

Reading and Assignment Schedule

A "CC" denotes electronic readings available via Cougar Courses

Jan. 22 Introduction to the Course
 Active Reading Skills Assignment

Jan. 24 What is International Political Economy?

Cohn, Ch. 1 "Introduction"

Study Questions: What is international political economy (IPE)? How does IPE differ from international security studies? What is "globalization?" Why is globalization an important topic of study for international political economists? What is the global "North?" What is the global "South?" Why are international political economists concerned with "North-North Relations" and "North-South Relations?" What are the three principal theoretical perspectives in IPE?

Active Reading Skills Mini-Workshop

Jan. 29

International Political and Economic Institutions

Cohn, Ch. 2 "Managing the Global Economy Since World War II: The Institutional Framework"

Study Questions: How can global economic relations before World War II be characterized? How did the nature of global economic relations before WWII help lead to the formation of the Bretton Woods system? Know the meaning and significance (i.e., why they are important in IPE) of the following terms: devaluation, balance of payments, fixed exchange rates, bilateral aid, floating exchange rates. What are the functions of the IMF, World Bank, and General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade/WTO? Which states have the most influence over the policies pursued by the IMF and World Bank? Why is this the case? What is "purchasing power parity (PPP)?" What is the PPP used for? What is the "human development index (HDI)?" What is the HDI used for? In general, what characteristics distinguish the global South from the global North? What are the major differences within the global South? What is the G-77? Why was the G-77 formed? How is the G-77 different from similar groups in the North (G-5,7,8,10, etc...)?

Jan. 31

The Cold War Economic System

CC - Robert Gilpin, "The Cold War International Economy"

Study Questions: What are the characteristics of "stagflation?" What factors contributed to the rise of stagflation? What were the economic and political factors that led to the success of the early post-WWII world economy? What were the fundamental principles of the Bretton Woods system (BWS)? How did the United States serve as the guarantor of the BWS? What role did the US dollar play in the international monetary system? What were the economic and political aims of the fixed exchange rate system? What is "seignorage?" What privileges did seignorage confer upon the United States? Why did international confidence in the US dollar erode in the 1960s and early 1970s? Which countries were the most important economic partners to the US after the creation of the BWS? How did these countries help the US? What was GATT? What were the fundamentals of GATT? What was the purpose of GATT? Why did the WTO replace GATT? What were the developments that eventually weakened the BWS? Why was there a change from fixed exchange rates to flexible exchange rates in the early 1970s? Why did the European countries move toward creating their own regional system? What is the "new protectionism?" Why did it arise? At which country was most of the protectionism directed? Why? What is "monetarism?" What were the implications of its adoption by the central bankers in Europe and the United States?

- Apr. 22 Case #2 - Structural Adjustment Programs in the Global South: Help or Hindrance?
CC - Sandberg, “The IMF Structural Adjustment Program for Zambia’s Agricultural Sector”
(Write your case #2 paper on the 3 topics below)
1) Briefly define each of the policy components of the IMF’s “high conditionality SAP” and explain the goal of each component as it relates to the IMF Structural Adjustment Program. (Tip: writing out the definition and goal of each component can be easily accomplished in 2-3 sentences. DO NOT simply quote the descriptions of each component in the Sandberg reading.)
2) Explain the impacts that the SAP had on the availability of agricultural credit and on inputs for the agricultural sector in Zambia.
3) If you were the director of the IMF, what lessons would the Zambian case teach you about how to design and implement an SAP in an African country? Use evidence from the case to support your argument here.

PSCI 460 Take-Home Midterm

Please complete a typed (or word processed), seven to nine page double-spaced paper using 12 point font that accomplishes ALL of the tasks below. My main criterion for grading your exam will be whether you accomplished the tasks required by the topic. 75% of the paper grade will be determined by the "content" of your paper (i.e., did you do everything you were supposed to do? How well did you accomplish the tasks? Did you use material from the readings effectively?). YOU MAY ONLY CITE EVIDENCE FROM THE READINGS AND NOT FROM YOUR LECTURE NOTES. PAPERS RELYING PRIMARILY ON LECTURE NOTES WILL RECEIVE A FAILING GRADE. The remaining 25% of the paper grade will be determined by the "mechanics" of your paper (i.e., grammar, citation, organization, spelling, punctuation, etc...). You will need to use the MLA style for your in-text citations as well as your paper's bibliography. A guide for MLA in-text citations can be found at:

http://library.csusm.edu/finding/more/style_guides/mla-inline.pdf

A guide for putting together a MLA style bibliography is available at:

Please read the "Grading Guidelines for Written Assignments" and "What is Analysis?" sections in the syllabus to help you with the writing of your paper. The "Grading Guidelines for Written Assignments" section will help you understand what you need to do to write an "A" quality paper, "B" quality paper, "C" quality paper, etc... The "What is Analysis?" section will help you understand how to use explicit reasoning and avoid implicit reasoning. For more information on avoiding plagiarism please go to:

Papers are due on Tuesday, Mar. 11th in class.

Paper Tasks:

- 1) Summarize the philosophy, or beliefs, of the following schools of thought in IPE: Realism, Liberalism, and Historical Structuralism (approx. 4 pages)
 - 2) Describe the purpose, rules, and functions of the Bretton Woods institutions (i.e., IMF, World Bank, and GATT) [approx. 2 pages]
 - 3) Using what you have learned about the three perspectives and the Bretton Woods institutions, explain the United States' decision to create the Bretton Woods institutions after WWII from each of the three perspectives. In other words, from a Realist perspective, why did the US create the Bretton Woods institutions? From a Liberal perspective? From an Historical Structuralist perspective? (2-3 pages)
- THIS LAST SECTION IS THE MOST IMPORTANT SECTION!!!

Final Paper Assignment

“Living in a Neoliberal World: Everybody Benefits, But Why Do Some Benefit More than Others?”

Write a total of eight (8) pages, double-spaced, with margins no larger than 1.25 inches and a font no smaller than 12 points on the TWO topics below:

Topic #1: Choose a day to list all the products (e.g. alarm clock, gasoline, telephone, food, stove, car, etc...) and services (e.g., car wash, utilities, telecommunications, etc...) that you consume and use from the time that you wake up, to the time you go to bed. After you have compiled this list try to determine which products and services have a “global connection” (please attach your list at the end of your paper). For example, where was your alarm clock made? Where were the clothes that you wore that day made? If you used any energy derived from oil, what countries were the most likely exporters of that energy? Where was the food that you consumed that day grown? Who harvested this food? Try to account for as many of the goods and services that you consume/use that day as possible and then briefly assess how much you depend on the global flow of capital, goods, labor, and services in your everyday life. (approx. 2 pages)

Topic #2: Based on what you learned from the three case studies (i.e., NAFTA, Structural Adjustment in Zambia, and Wal-Mart) and the two readings and video on “outsourcing,” explain which types of individuals, social groups, firms, and countries are benefiting the most from neoliberal economic policies and globalization. In your explanation you must use evidence and examples from each case and each reading/video on “outsourcing.” In addition, please use these same sources of information to also explain which types of individuals, social groups, firms, and countries are benefiting the least from neoliberal economic policies and globalization. In your explanation you must use examples from each case and each reading/video on “outsourcing.” Also make sure that you properly cite the articles and videos using the MLA style of citation and include a MLA-style bibliography of these cited sources. You will find all the necessary bibliographic information (except for the Polaski reading) in the syllabus. (approx. 6-8 pages)
