- Course Title: Using Standards and Outcomes to Plan for Instruction (K-12)

- Course Description: This is an online course designed to help teachers improve their abilities to plan for instruction. This course discusses key questions and ideas in the foundations of planning, and also includes modules on long-term, unit, and daily lesson planning. Scenarios are presented that involve both short-term and long-term planning. Students are guided through the process of thinking and considering the many pieces of creating effective instruction.

- Course Objectives: Provide specific student learning outcomes and how they will be achieved.
  Review classroom examples and planning tools, (online resources)
  Use planning tools to make plans based on standards, outcomes, and evidence from student work.

- Evaluation: What will be the basis for grades? How will you know that the students have achieved the course objectives?
  Time spent in programs is reported via the Prep Period online management system. Students must send a report of their time in the system, as well as written reports of activities. Students must complete at least two activities related to each of the four modules below, for a total of at least eight written reports.

  Module 1: Foundations of Planning
  Module 2: Lesson Planning
  Module 3: Unit Planning
  Module 4: Long Term Planning

- Course Length:
  15 hours in online course
  5-10 additional hours in outside class work to complete assignments

- Proposed Date(s): September 15, 2008 → ongoing

- Location:
  This is an online course found at www.prepperiod.org.

- Support Needs:
  Students will need to have the latest version of Flash, a recent Internet browser, and Adobe Acrobat loaded on their computer. The technical requirements are also specified on the site, with links to support sites if software needs to be downloaded.

- Comments:
  These online classes have been produced by and currently available through San Diego County Office of Education.
