CSUSM to Launch Fully-Online M.A. in Education, Focus on Literacy

What: CSUSM to launch fully-online Master of Arts in Education, Focus on Literacy program in Spring 2013

Where: California State University San Marcos, Extended Learning

When: Priority admissions deadline for Spring 2013 is January 3, 2013

Why: In response to a widespread need for individuals who are trained in the field of literacy, the MA in Education prepares highly effective educators to meet the literacy needs of monolingual and multilingual students.

The MA in Education, focus on Literacy is a fully online degree program that prepares educators to teach literacy in the 21st century classroom. Students will develop skills and knowledge in all aspects of practice related to effectively teaching literacy in schools. Graduates will gain a better understanding of contemporary theories and empirical research and will be able to create an environment that fosters reading by integrating knowledge, practices, and methods learned throughout the program. In addition to a Master of Arts in Education degree, graduate students holding a CTC-approved teaching credential may be eligible for recommendation for the Reading and Literacy Added Authorization and the Reading and Literacy Leadership Specialist Credential.

For more information about the MA in Education, Focus on Literacy program, please contact 760-750-4020 or el@csusm.edu.
