CSUSM Anthropology Department
Articulation with Community Colleges
Articulation with local community colleges and collaboration with the anthropology programs at local community colleges have strongly guided the development of the CSUSM anthropology major. A primary goal of CSUSM is to complement existing anthropology programs in the region, rather than to compete with them. Introductory courses in cultural, biological, linguistic, or archaeological anthropology given at Community Colleges can count toward preparation for the anthropology major at Cal State San Marcos. These courses are listed in ASSIST.

In addition, certain lower division courses, such as those listed below, specializing in various disciplinary concentrations of the major, including archaeology, linguistics, biological anthropology and Native American/American Indian Studies, can count for major requirements (up to 9 units in addition to the required 6 units of Lower Division preparation for the major coursework). In other words, a total of 15 units are possible to transfer, with the additional 9 Community College units counting for 300-level coursework. Anthropology coursework taken at other institutions may be applied to the anthropology major only when approved by department chair.
