Join us for a Faculty Center workshop!

Rethinking Your Syllabus:
What messages do we send to students?

Join your fellow colleagues for a workshop to help examine syllabus language as you put last minute touches on your syllabi before the semester starts.

Incorporating recent literature on growth-mindset, grit, intrinsic motivation, and critical pedagogy, this workshop will help faculty critically examine the way our syllabi present our policies, hopes, and goals to our students. This workshop will support faculty in crafting messages that both foster learning and also support students when they struggle. So bring your laptop & syllabi and join us!

Note: This workshop is not centered around course redesign, learning outcomes, assessment or other pedagogical heavy lifting. Rather, the goal is to provide information, resources and an environment to engage colleagues in discussions about fostering academic success through syllabus language.

When: January 19, 2018, 10 am -1pm
Where: Faculty Center, KEL 2413
What: Lunch and great conversation!
