II. President’s Remarks:
- Welcome and Giving Day Success: President Neufeldt provided a holiday greeting. She shared in Chair Jackson's gratitude for the support of each Foundation Board Director's CSUSM Giving Day gift to help raise over $284,000 in the 24-hour period. In particular, she thanked Jack Raymond for funding several bonuses and the Mystery Power Hour, Steve and Laura Wagner who funded the challenges, as well as Tony Jackson, Carleen Kreider, Emilie Hersh, Toni Ritchey and Dave Wilson who all funded frontline matches.
- Fall/Spring Updates: As fall semester is wrapping up, plans for spring semester continue to unroll. With the current stay-at-home order, nearly all in-person/hybrid courses have shifted to fully virtual since the Thanksgiving break. Only those employees who absolutely need to come to campus are approved to be on campus for critical business needs or research. Residential students are part of a mandatory COVID-19 testing program, being tested every two weeks. The on-campus testing facility is receiving about 1,600 visits per day. Kaiser Permanente has asked for a similar partnership for a drive-thru testing.
- Athletics: Spring 2021 will look similar to fall 2020 with athletic competitions on hold. A Cougar Athletic Council will be launched next year, chaired by Tony Jackson, to support student athletes and philanthropic efforts • Budget/Enrollment: The three campus guiding priorities continue to be: our people, our students’ success and the ongoing sustainability of our organization. The Chancellor’s Office has extended the admissions window for fall 2021 to December 15. A call-center is being created to help those interested in applying.

• University Advancement Vice President Recruitment: President Neufeldt thanked Ms. Mendoza for her current leadership of University Advancement. A search has begun for a permanent vice president. Included on the search committee will be vice chair of the Board, Steve Wagner.

• Looking Forward: President Neufeldt shared that during the last three decades the campus has grown beautifully into a university of place and regional anchor. Now is time to ask what will make the university distinctive moving forward. The pandemic has reaffirmed the mission to widen doors of educational opportunity and recommit to the mission of access, student success, and academic and inclusive excellence.

  o Strategic Planning: The process has begun to outline the next strategic plan. The outcome will result in a set of institutional priorities that will position the university for success. Part of the process is evaluating what is being done well and invest to further leverage our efforts. These efforts will need philanthropic support, and President Neufeldt requested the Board support these efforts.

  o Social Mobility/Student Success: Student success, a core pillar of CSUSM, is something President Neufeldt has built her career on. While higher education is often called out as having created the socioeconomic divide in our country, CSUSM is committed to providing access to an affordable, quality education, for students of all backgrounds. CSUSM was ranked 28th out of almost 1,500 schools in the annual Social Mobility Index by CollegeNet, moving forward 8 points since last year. A new student success coaching model was launched supporting all first-time freshman with success coaches and academic mentors. CSUSM is positioned to be a national model in student success but it will take innovation and philanthropic resources to bring the initiative to full fruition. With shining examples from the College of Business Administration, in order to institutionalize across our university, infrastructure is needed along with partnerships with philanthropic supporters.

  o Innovation: Campus was founded on innovation and it is time to take it to the next level by nurturing an innovation ecosystem. The focus is to create a virtual and physical space that brings resources, education, and support across the disciplines together for students, faculty and our community to engage in problem solving. Help is needed in bringing people and partners together who can support the cause philanthropically.

  o Workforce Development: Focusing on student success and innovation is key not only for the individual and generational impact it has on students and their families, but also because our region is looking to CSUSM to support the workforce needs of the future. With the passing of AB 1460 efforts will be aligned to advance Ethnic Studies to help assure all students become well rounded.

  o Philanthropic Support: To move these initiatives forward and help lessen the socioeconomic divide, President Neufeldt asked for philanthropic support and connections.

• In Closing: President Neufeldt expressed deep gratitude for the Board’s support. Amid dealing with the immediate term emergency of COVID-19 and the public health crisis it has presented, she encouraged all to keep looking to the future and the pivotal role the university will play in fostering socioeconomic mobility, innovation and economic recovery.

• Concluding her remarks, President Neufeldt answered questions around the launching of a dual factor authentication, as well as classes to support the veteran population that transfers to the university.
