Takeaways

- SY are generally satisfied with their ability to get the courses they need; less so to get the schedule they want
- SY are generally satisfied with their interactions with institutional actors, particularly with faculty
- More than half of SY still think they're going to graduate in four years, even those with <30 units
- SY generally see their courses are more interesting and more difficult, though this varies by College
- SY access to faculty varies by College and quality of interaction varies by hours working
- Classroom and learning engagement is steady but Major Confidence is volatile

Takeaways

- Racial climate does not seem to vary across these categories*
- Sense of Belonging and connection to campus varies by hours working
- Academic Self-Concept varies considerably
- Goal commitment is very high and steady
- Institutional commitment is lower and varies, particularly by College
