2018 PARTNER TESTIMONIAL

"This was another great César Chávez event this year. I really feel like the work we do with our organization and the farm really ties in with the work that César Chávez did. The students were wonderful and jumped right into projects, sometimes outside of their comfort zone. It was really great to see so many people working together for a common cause."

The goals of the Brother Benno Foundation are to see that, within the limits of its resources, no one in the area goes hungry, no one goes without shelter or clothing, and most importantly, no one goes without someone to care for him or her. ProduceGood

ProduceGood helps to feed people by gleaning backyard fruit throughout North County. After almost five years and a collaboration with Feeding America San Diego, they have been able to increase distribution capacity, putting practices in place to dramatically increase the number of growers, picks and volunteers. Additionally, they are committed to finding other sustainable solutions to alleviate hunger, reclaim and repurpose waste and promote the health and well-being of community members through social engagement, reciprocity and giving.

Richland Elementary School

The 5th grade elements at Richland saved plastic bottle caps as part of a fundraiser for needed supplies, and decided to up-cycle the caps into a mural art project. With help from CSUSM, they built a mural for the cafeteria. CSUSM volunteers worked with 5th grade students painting and using electric drills to screw in coordinating color bottle caps. This school beautification project will bring joy to students and teachers for many years to come.

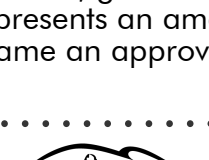

San Marcos Historical Society - Luiseño Learning Garden

The Society is a private, non-profit corporation devoted to the collection, preservation and presentation of artifacts, documents and photos relating to the history of the area. With a desire to show the community the beauty of a nature-inspired water-wise garden, the Vallecitos Water District donated a California native plant garden to Heritage Park. Highlighted in the ethnobotanical garden are the cultural uses of plants used by the Native Americans that used to live in the area.

Sustainable Food Project Garden at CSUSM

The intent of the project is to grow food as part of the learning and class activities in Geography 460: Food Systems and Emerging Markets. They have exceeded beyond expectations in this regard. At the same time, the garden is much more than just a class activity. Students, who are responsible for building and farming the garden, gain hands-on experience in the integration of experiential learning with curriculum. This presents an amazing opportunity for both future teachers and gardeners alike. The Food Project became an approved food source for the CSUSM campus childcare center in Fall 2012.
