

Save the Date

LiveStreaming with Teacher-Scholars on Academic Reading and Writing

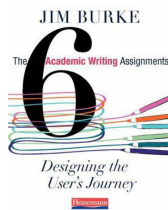

The WRITE Center, a national research and development center focusing on secondary writing, funded by the Institute of Education Sciences at the UCI School of Education, and the National Writing Project announce...

A free livestreaming event showcasing three acclaimed authors of professional books for teachers on academic reading and writing:

Wednesdays, June 26, July 3, July 10
9:00 a.m. - 10:45 a.m.

June 26

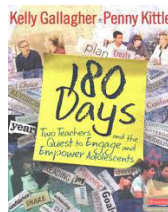

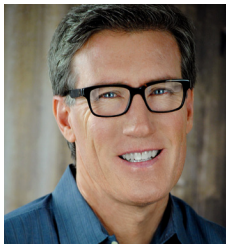

Jim Burke, English teacher, Burlingame High School
Six Academic Writing Assignments: Designing the User's Journey

Livestream Link:
<https://livestream.com/accounts/867536/events/8665701>

July 3

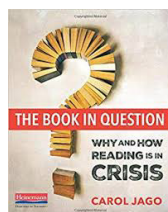

Kelly Gallagher, English teacher, Magnolia High School
180 Days: Two Teachers and the Quest to Engage and Empower Adolescents

Livestream Link:
<https://livestream.com/accounts/867536/events/8684620>

July 10

Carol Jago, Associate Director, California Reading and Literature Project
The Book in Question: Why and How Reading is in Crisis

Livestream Link:
<https://livestream.com/accounts/867536/events/8684622>

Teachers are encouraged to participate virtually and will be able to send questions electronically to a moderator. For further information, please go to www.writecenter.org.